Directors of the Architectural Heritage Society have been working to update and revitalize our program. We no longer publish a magazine and have closed our office because we can be more affective and less expensive using the internet.

The internet plays a major role in modern life, especially in the lives of young people who will benefit most from our work today and may eventually take up our cause. It offers more productive ways in which to engage and influence people. And it will help us take a giant step forward through dialogue with people anywhere and everywhere. We are a worldwide movement.

Many hundreds of historic buildings and sites have been protected from the wrecking ball by our provincial and municipal governments, in cooperation with building owners and local groups like yours. We need to continue to demonstrate this important legacy, remaining true to our charter purpose of public education.

We want to address new priorities like rehabilitation, adaptive reuse, and long-term stewardship. We want to support diverse, livable neighbourhoods; the arts and creative industry; and sensitive new design. This seems holistic. There's substance.

The Society is building a new website today at <http://www.ahsk.ca/>. We also have established a presence on facebook. Members of the Society approved an annual budget for development of new web-based services at our AGM last March. We are positive our web services can attract funding and advertising, if we build these right.

Our main website now shows:

- Our mission and explanation of membership
- Frontpage news and calendar of events
- Directory of heritage professionals like architects and designers, engineers, conservators, constructors, designers, engineers, general contractors, government agencies, local and national heritage organizations, and archives
- WORTH Magazine on ISSUU (back issues)
- Resources for persons considering projects
- Historic places and sites

Please renew your membership with the Society for 2016. The fee is still just $20. Members are invited to attend the Society's annual meeting each year and will receive our Annual Report and newsletters either by mail or email.

We request your email address, if you have not provided it previously. It's much easier and less expensive to communicate with our members by email. Your address will not be used or shared for any other purpose.
